Abstract

It is a historical debate whether the sounds or phonemes have some natural meanings or not. The purpose of this paper is to propose a newly developed theory, explaining the relationship between sounds and their meanings. The paper suggests a unitary code, which is the root cause of every existence including animals and human. This unitary code carries a code of converting meanings into sounds. A model of structure of existence is explained in the paper, proposing placement of phonemes. The placements themselves explain the meanings of the phonemes. Paper provides the semantic values of maximum usable sounds of IPA (International Phonetic Alphabets). Devanagari representations of the IPA are also provided. A wide range of words, including all languages of the world, can be explained by using the semantic values proposed in the paper. To prove the correctness of the theory, we are providing herewith 95 words of English language.

Keywords: Perception, Semantic value, Sounds, Phonemes, Structure, Existence
1. Introduction

Phonosemantics is a hypothesis which explains that every sound in this universe has a specific meaning allotted by nature. Under this hypothesis, it is believed that, as and when we speak or listen to any sound, we feel a corresponding specific emotion inside. All languages in this universe are evolved because of this relationship between sound and meaning. In spite of strong philosophical support, modern linguists are not happy with it. The theory explained in the paper resolves almost all objections raised by the modern linguists and suggests a systematic and logical theory explaining the semantic values of phonemes of IPA.

1.1 Vocalization is A Gesture

Animals convey their messages (psychological and biological messages) through gestures by using different capabilities of their bodies. A gesture can be defined as a conversion of ‘meaning’ into ‘body movement’. Both the message observer and the message provider, never have to learn any gesture language anywhere. All animals (including humans) have the same inbuilt sign language, which is directly provided by nature in the form of unitary code. Different types of ear-movements, eye-movements, and tail-movements explain different types of messaging. Just like the other outflow expressions, vocalization is also a gesture. “Speaking (moving tongue in a specific manner)” and “gesture (moving tail in a specific manner)” are two different forms of the same process. This logic establishes the meaningfulness of sounds.

1.2 Unitary Existence

A biological body is made of different types of cells, and every cell is evolved and controlled by the same code named DNA. In the same way, universe is made of different types of existences, and every existence is evolved and controlled by the same inbuilt unitary code. This code is called science or God. Every existence is structured with this code or science. This unitary code or God is a creator of us and so it cannot be defined fully, but it can be decoded partly and the structure of existence can be explained in a systematically divisible format. All these parts of existence are placed systematically in such a way that their composition constitutes a living entity. As far as phonosemantics is concerned, different parts of existence represent different phonemes. And the phonemes can be explained on the basis of their placement in the structure of existence. This structure of existence is responsible for conversion from “meaning to phoneme (outflow sounds; speaking)” and “phoneme to meaning (inflow sounds; listening)”. Being a common code, the listener and the speaker understand the common meaning of a gesture. The model (structure) of existence is attached with the paper, explaining consonants and vowels separately.

1.3 Naming of an Object

Listening with ear or observing with eyes is the same process of inflow perception. Every object is made of infinite number of properties. A living being may be called an animal, horse, white colored, riding facility, store of energy, having different organs, and specific DNA. These properties can never be explained with a single word. Secondly, nature never gives any name to any object. The naming is done by the observer, who observes the object according to his own physical, biological, psychological and intellectual needs, purpose, available capabilities. Hence, there is difference in formed the image and the perceived image. The formed image is converted in to the perceived image according to the application of needs, purposes, and capabilities. And the structure of existence converts the perceived image into appropriate phonemes. Hence, we have differences in naming due to difference in breed, culture and environmental conditions of the observer. SOCRATES said: “Well, if anyone could express the essence of each thing in letters and syllables, would he not express the nature of each thing?” Margaret Magnus made the remark on the above conclusion that “it makes no sense that different cultures would elect to use completely different sounds to mimic this one essence unless one of the cultures is right and the others are wrong”. We feel a little misunderstanding between the two. When SOCRATES talks about ‘nature’, he talks about the ‘observing nature’, not the ‘existing nature’. The ‘existing nature’ of chair may be the same for different cultures, but the ‘observing nature’ may not be the same. We feel a little mistake from the side of SOCRATES that he used the word ‘nature’, in place of ‘part nature’ because a person observes the object partly and ignores the rest of it. This is according to his need, availability, and capability. Every different person can observe the different part of the object, and can name differently.

In this way, the naming of an object is done according to the observation by the observer. And observation is made by the structure of existence which is common in all existences. And the structure has all capability to define his view regarding the object. Again, the observer is not defining the ‘object’ but defining his ‘views’ regarding the object.

It should be kept in mind that the process described above that is conversion from sound into meanings, and meanings into sound started around 30000-100000 years ago.

2. Structure of Existence

The structure of existence, which is common in all existences, is the basic observer of the object. Every existence is made of five indeclinable chests as shown in Table 1. These indeclinable chests are common in all existences, but the abilities filled in the chests may differ. Different types of dissimilarities, different types of vibrations, different types of vision, different types of support, and different types of stimulation produce different types of character. That is why we are all different, but within the same structure of existence.

Out of the five indeclinable chests, first four chests are provided by raw material of existence in the form of code (DNA in case of biological bodies). And the fifth one is the stimulator, which stimulates all other four to gain space, time, sense, and matter, and the existence becomes alive. There are different types of existences, namely cosmological, physical, biological, psychological, and intellectual. Every existence has its own definition of space, time, sense, and matter. For example, the “space of physical world” can be called “physical ability in the biological world”, “courage in the psychological world”, and “intelligence in the intellectual world”.

As and when the data of indeclinable chests interact with each other, five basic segments of life evolve. These segments are: analyzed clarity, derived strength, acquired identity, offered appearance, and occupied flow in time. These segments of ‘life’ define all aspects of the living image. Further these segments also represent their specific groups of sounds; hence we can directly co-relate the aspect of image and sound. In this way, the observed image can be directly converted into sound and sound can also be converted in to observed image directly.

3.1.1 Chest of dissimilarities – It (a) offers dissimilarities to the vision, to analyze the clarity in the form of feature (accurate detail); (b) provides dissimilarities to the vibrations, to offer appearance in the form of submission (intensified diversity).

3.1.2 Chest of vibrations – It (a) provides vibrations to the support, to derive strength in the form of power (firm energy); (b) provides vibrations to dissimilarities, to offer appearance in the form of submission (diverted intensity).

3.1.3 Chest of vision – It (a) provides vision to the dissimilarities, to analyze the clarity in the form of feature (detailed accuracy); (b) provides vision to the support, to acquire identity in the form of bond (believed logic).

3.1.4 Chest of support – It (a) provides support to the vibrations, and derives strength in the form of power (energetic firmness); (b) provides support to the vision, and acquires identity in the form of bond (logical belief).

3.1.5 Chest of stimulation (flow) – It is the fifth indeclinable ability of existence, called ‘mind [relative term]’, providing sense to all other four indeclinable abilities. It evolves each part of life one by one (a) offering appearance; (b) deriving strength; (c) acquiring identity; and (d) analyzing clarity. One rotation of ‘sense’ is called one ‘age’, or one cycle of wave motion.

3.2 Expression of life in consonants

3.2.1 Ability to offer the appearance - Before starting the interaction between dissimilarities and vibrations, the ‘dissimilarities without vibrations’ and the ‘vibrations without dissimilarities’ create a ‘without’, which always remains in the future and is symbolized by the nasal sound /n/ [ɳ]. Offering ‘dissimilarities’ creates ‘diversity’, and offering ‘vibrations’ creates ‘intensity’. ‘Diversity’ and ‘intensity’ create the ‘gesture’ of appearance. This act of interaction indicated as ‘towards offering’, lies in the present and is symbolized by unvoiced sound /ɿ/ [ɿ]. When the present tense is converted into the past tense, the ‘towards offering’ converts into the already ‘offered’, and is symbolized by voiced sound /ɿ/ [ɿ]. In case of ‘established offerings’ the symbols for the present and the past sounds will be /θ/ or /ɿ̃/ [ɿ] and /ɿ̤/ [ɿ] respectively. The appearance can be of three types: property, mobility, and quantity.

3.2.2 Ability to accept within the identity - Before starting the interaction between vision and support, when vision needs support, and support needs vision, a ‘need’ is created. This is called the future in acquiring, and denoted as nasal sound /m/ [ɱ]. Acquiring ‘vision’ creates ‘logic’, and acquiring ‘support’ creates ‘belief’. ‘Logic’ and ‘belief’ create the ‘bond’ of identity. The act of interaction indicated as ‘towards acquiring’, lies in the present and is symbolized by unvoiced sound /p/ [ɿ]. When the present tense is converted into the past tense, the ‘towards acquiring’ converts into the already ‘acquired’, and is symbolized by voiced sound /b/ [ɿ]. The above acquiring is according to the conditions applied by existence, and is called ‘conditional acquiring’. Sometimes existence does not apply any condition to acquire, or the existent does not obey the conditions, in that case the existent will be the ‘unconditional acquiring’, and symbolized by unvoiced and voiced sounds /p^b/ or /b^b/ [ɿ] and /b^b/ [ɿ] for the present and the past respectively.

Table 2. Expression of life in consonants
3.2.3 Ability to analyze the clarity - Before starting interaction between vision and dissimilarities, when vision needs dissimilarities, and the dissimilarity needs vision, a need is created. This is called the future in analyzing, and is denoted by nasal sound /ŋ/ [ङ्]. Analysis by ‘vision’ creates ‘accuracy’ and analyzing ‘dissimilarities’ creates ‘detail’. ‘Accuracy’ and ‘detail’ create ‘clarity’ in ‘feature’. The act of interaction indicated as ‘towards analyzing’, lies in the present and is symbolized by unvoiced sound /kʰ/ [ख्]. When the present tense is converted into the past tense, the ‘towards analyzing’ converts into the already ‘analyzed’, and is symbolized by voiced sound /gʱ/ [घ्]. The above analysis is according to the capabilities in the existence, and is called ‘open possibilities’. Sometimes existence does not have the capability to analyze. In that case the existent will be ‘closed conscious analyzing’, and symbolized by unvoiced and voiced sound /kʰ/ [ख्] and /gʱ/ [घ्] for the present and the past respectively.

3.2.4 Ability to derive the strength - Before starting interaction between vibrations and support, when support needs vibrations, and the vibrations need support, a need is created. This is called the future in deriving, and denoted as nasal sound /ŋ/ [ङ्]. ‘Deriving support’ creates ‘rigidness’ and ‘deriving vibrations’ creates ‘energy’. ‘Rigidness’ and ‘energy’ create the ‘power’ of strength. The act of interaction is indicated as ‘towards deriving’, lies in the present and is symbolized by unvoiced sound of /ʧ/ [्]. When the present tense is converted into the past tense, the ‘towards deriving’ converts into the already ‘derived’, and is symbolized by the voiced sound of /ʤ/ [्]. The above deriving is according to the ‘pleasure’ in the existence, and is called ‘free liveliness’. Sometimes existence does not have the capability to derive. In that case the existent becomes the ‘obstructed liveliness’, and is symbolized by unvoiced sound of /ʧʰ/ [्] and voiced sound of /ʤʰ/ [्] for the present and the past respectively.

3.2.5 Ability to occupy the flow - Just before existence evolves, the soul (stimulator) needs the other four elements to make the existence alive. Opposite to this, the empty spaces of four indeclinable chests have eagerness to be alive by accepting the soul. This eagerness in the system creates the future and is symbolized by the nasal sound /ŋ/ [्]. As soon as eagerness starts activation, existence starts making the existent flow through the available space of raw material. The system moves into the present tense. ‘Towards occupying’, and ‘towards activating’ are the indications of that, and are symbolized by the unvoiced sound /ʈ/ [्] or /t/. Completion of the present provides us with the past, where we have already achieved our goal and is symbolized by the voiced sound /ɖ/ [्]. In case of ‘barred fluency’ the symbols for the present and the past sounds will be /ʈʰ/ [्] and /ɖʰ/ [्] respectively. The flow of existence is available in the space of raw material, and with time in all three directions. Physical world is ‘space of raw material’ for biological existence. Biological world is ‘space of raw material’ for psychological existence. Psychological world is ‘space of raw material’ for Intellectual existence.

3.2.6 Ability to express in physical - Every outflow (executing) is the transfer of signals from the intellectual to the psychological, to the biological, and finally to the physical world. Here every relatively lower world is called physical world. These signals are made of life wave. This life wave is absorbed by the physical (lower) entity. Absorption has three stages.

Physical availability of clarity, symbolized by /s/ [्], is received as ‘sense’ of the lower (physical) world, is called physical expression. The physical availability of strength, symbolized by /ʃ/ [्], is received as ‘time’ of the lower (physical) world is called physical experience. The physical availability of flow is received by the lower world as physical interaction, and is symbolized by /ʂ/ [्] and called physical occupation. As soon as the act of outflow is completed, the cycle of activation is finally absorbed by the lower world, and we call it ‘releasing from referred world’ and ‘living in physical world’, symbolized by /h/ [ह].

3.2.7 Consonants made from vowels - /ǝ/ is denoted as “existence without existent”. If a vowel is superimposed (not supported) on /ǝ/, it will be converted into consonant. We have four consonants, which are made of vowels. These are: 1. visible without force existence /ɪ+ǝ=j/, 2. invisible forceful existence /ʊ+ǝ=l/, 3. available expansion /ɻ+ǝ=l/, 4. acquiring concentration /ɭ+ǝ=r/.

3.2.8 Composite and other consonants - Apart from the basic consonants, we have many composite consonants, which we are not discussing here.

4. Representation of Vowels

4.1 Indeclinable Capabilities of Vowels

4.1.1 Chest of expansion-visibility – It offers ‘expansion’ and ‘visibility’ while interacting with ‘expansion-force’ and ‘shrinkage-visibility’ respectively.

4.1.2 Chest of expansion-force – It offers ‘expansion’ and ‘force’ while interacting with ‘expansion-visibility’ and ‘shrinkage-force’ respectively.

4.1.3 Chest of shrinkage-visibility – It acquires ‘visibility’ and ‘shrinkage’ while interacting with ‘expansion-visibility’ and ‘shrinkage-force’ respectively.

4.1.4 Chest of shrinkage-force – It acquires ‘shrinkage’ and ‘force’ while interacting with ‘shrinkage-visibility’ and ‘expansion-force’ respectively.

4.1.5 Chest of open space – It offers ‘empty space’ for all expansion, shrinkage, visibility, and force.

4.2 Expression of Life in Vowels

Vowels are said to be the quantum of consonants. Consonants cannot be pronounced without getting space from vowels. Vowels are made of different types of spaces, where consonants can flow. Vowels are like space carrying sense in all three directions (in-flow, out-flow, and self-flow). Vowels do have a similar “model of existence” as consonants. The model contains five Indeclinable chests named: expansion visibility, expansion force, shrinkage visibility, shrinkage force, and non-existent, and five spaces for the life of an existent. These are: space for existence, space for visibility without force, space for force without visibility, space for expansion ability, and space of shrinkage ability.

6. Experimental Results

We have applied the above semantic values on 95 words. While reading the words, please follow the guideline. (1) Every word should be read from right to left. (2) Divide the word so that each component has a vowel in the end. In case of not having any vowel at the end of the word, additional /ǝ/ can be assumed. For example, /bæskɪt/ will be divided as /bæ/ + /skɪ/ + /t/ ǝ . While reading a component, start with the last phoneme, which is a vowel in the form of ‘adjective’. After that, read first - second _ _ _ consonants in the form of ‘adjective’, till the second last phoneme, which is to be read as ‘noun’. Consider the component /skɪt/. We will read it as /ɪ/ (adjective)→/s/ (adjective)→/k/ (noun), which is “visible expressible consciousness”. While reading the word, appropriate prepositions like ‘of’, ‘in’, ‘by’ ‘to’ etc. can be added between the words defined by the phonemes. (3) In the case of a consonant followed by a vowel, and the definition of the vowel contains a word ‘existent’, the word ‘existent’ will be replaced by the consonant in the definition of the vowel. For example, /bæt/ can be read as “visibility of existent bond in existence” (4) Consonants supported by vowels and individual vowels will be read as nouns. (5) Unsupported consonants and supporting vowels will be treated as adjectives (6) The word ‘existent’ will cover all nine types of existents, which are ‘property, mobility, and quantity,’ multiplied by ‘objective, action, and feeling’. (7) Many languages do not have the pronunciation of /t/, and hence can be read as /ʈ/and /t/ both. (8) It is just explaining the words, not defining the object, as we have explained that naming denotes the ‘views’ of the observer, not the object.

7. Conclusion

It is concluded that all phonemes of IPA as well as Devanagari have specific meanings allotted by nature. It is explained why the modern linguists are not happy with phonosemantics. It is because they try to name an object on the basis of its construction. The reality is that nature never provides any name to any object. It is the observer who observes the object according to his needs, utilities, and capabilities and stimulates different places of its structure of existence while observing. Different places of its structure represent different phonemes. The observer has limited sounds in his inbuilt structure of existence. All living beings are made with a common structure of existence. The structure of existence for consonants and vowels are explained in tabulation format.

The paper has defined almost all usable phonemes of IPA and Devanagari scripts. These definitions were applied to 96 words and found satisfactory. In this way we have proved the correctness of the theory.
